1. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

2. Claims 1-17 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over U.S. Patent No. 5,182,922 to Alread et al. Alread et al discloses the claimed invention, including the compressor 14 and heat exchangers 11 and 12 connected to each other with rigid pipes or ducting 23A-23I. The ducting further has at least one curve 65. Furthermore, Alread et al discloses that the couplings are made of rigid material. See especially Figs. 3 and 4, where the couplings are shown as extensions 33-36 of the rigid pipes 31 and 32. However, Alread et al does not disclose the material or the outside diameters of the ducting. The materials of the ducting are considered to be a matter of obvious choice to one of ordinary skill in the art. It is well known to make the ducting of an air conditioning or refrigeration system out of metal ducting or pipes. Thus, in view of the clear disclosure in Alread et al that the ducting is made of rigid material, one of ordinary skill in the refrigeration art would be able to make the ducting of Alread et al out of metal, without undue experimentation, to yield the predictable result that the ducting would be long lasting. Also, the outside diameters of the ducting is considered to be a matter of obvious design choice to one of ordinary skill in the art. There is no apparent criticality or unexpected results given in the specification of the claimed limitation of the outside diameter of the ducting being no more than 13mm. One of ordinary skill in the art would be able to choose the appropriate diameter of the ducting of Alread et al without undue experimentation.

3. Applicant's arguments filed November 19, 2007 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive. Applicant's remarks are believed to be answered by the above rejection. Applicant has not distinguished his claimed invention over Alread et al. It should be noted that the couplings 30 of Alread et al, while described as flexible, are clearly made of rigid material as well as the ducting.

4. THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the mailing date of this final action.
